AMERICA PRESS APPROVES MORROW'S ACTION.

Blackest Pages of History.

(Baltimore, Md., News) — It is of course disgraceful that in a city of the size of Lexington and supposed orderliness, such riot as accompanied the trial of the Negro Lockett should be countenanced for a minute. But, due to the prompt action of Governor Morrow of Kentucky, a still greater disgrace — that a prisoner might have been lawfully taken from a court of justice — was averted.

This country cannot be expected to have reached a really high state of civilization until such outbreaks of uncivilized passion and bestiality as have been and are all too frequent are eliminated. It is a common place saying that the lynchings and attempted lynchings which occur in some parts of the country, but more especially in the south, constitute some of the blackest pages of our national history and the most uncomfortable thought of all is that such scenes still seem far from extermination.

There is No Excuse.

(The Outlook)

In primitive communities where such means of justice are lacking, or in communities where courts are corrupt or incompetent and do not act with decision and unsparring severity there is excuse for the assumption of power to punish by the people themselves; where these conditions do not exist, there is such excuse.

The Only Way?

(Philadelphia, Pa., Press.)

The south in general and Kentucky in particular should be very grateful for Governor Morrow's firmly courageous action. In using the militia to disperse an armed mob bent on lynching a Negro prisoner he has struck a blow at lynch law which will long be remembered and which should have salutary effect in effacing it altogether. The South needs more executives of his stamp and consciousness and his fearlessness.

That five people had to be killed while he was thus preserving law and order is deplorable. But there will be no disposition to blame Governor Morrow for this. The mob which sought to override lawful authority brought these casualties on itself, and is fortunate that none of its members did not fall before the rifles of the defenders of the government.

Lynching is an abomination peculiar to America. It is an evil tradition which has operated to stain the good repute of an otherwise law abiding people. Governor Morrow's way is the only effective way. The nation owes him gratitude for the example he has set.

The Government Challenged.

(Houston, Texas, Post.) But it was the government of Kentucky that the mob attacked when they undertook to take the Negro away from Kentucky authorities, and by that act they placed themselves in the position of insurrectionists, challenging the authority of their government. When men do that, they ought to know they take their lives into their own hands, and have no redress if they come to grief.

Calm Firmness Of Power

(Louisville, Ky., Courier) The calm firmness of the State in asserting its power is a warning to others who might be tempted into acts of anarchy or violence. It says to them: "Gaze on this and beware!" Kentucky has set an example for the country. Its stand will have a moral effect of inestimable public value. In some minds falsely believed to be a land of tolerated law-breaking and bloodshed, the State now takes on a new look as a majestic champion of law and order.

"Law and Order!" Be that the slogan for all and more and more with the people's government be vitilized into a thing to be respected and supported.

No Surrender to Mob.

(Knoxville, Tenn., Sentinel.) But the organized authorities cannot surrender to the mob. They must stand their ground and public sentiment uphold and support them, for the other alternative it would not be one or a half dozen lives that would die but the social order itself and the lives of the multitudes dependent upon the social order must pay the price.
